

SPANKS HIS WIFE LIKE UNRULY CHILD

Queens Dentist Tells Woes in Court, but Fails to Get a Warrant.

YOUNG COUPLES DISAGREE

Girl Stenographer Advised to Punch Her Workless Husband in the Jaw.

Dr. Albert G. Smith, dentist, of 233 Thirteenth street, College Point, stirred up a ripple of excitement when he undertook to relate some of the happenings that have made his home what he alleges it is. For instance, he spoke of his wife as trying to leave him and said: "I turned her over and spanked her just as I would any other unruly child." The dentist went to court to start an action against his wife on a charge of insanity. Before the complaint had been dismissed he told Magistrate Conway that he had been married for two years, but that his wife has not been living with him for a couple of months. Mrs. Smith's answer was that Dr. Smith was cruel to her. The magistrate told them to mend their ways.

About the same time spectators in the New Jersey avenue court, Brooklyn, were hearing Magistrate McCloskey's ideas of how to handle an unruly husband. Mrs. Estelle Epstein, 20 years old, of 733 New Jersey avenue, a wife of only fifteen months, had her husband, George, 29, in court on a charge of disorderly conduct. She charged him with refusing to work and threatening her with injury or death if she refused to support him.

"All you have to do in a case like that,"

Mrs. Epstein," remarked Magistrate McCloskey, "is punch him on the jaw." Mrs. Epstein testified that she has been working as a stenographer at $20 a week, and that her husband has been taking her salary and giving her forty cents a day for fare and luncheon. She added that he always escorted her to the car in the morning and met her at night—so that she might not be struck by an automobile and incapacitated for work. The husband interrupted the tale. "Aw, have a heart and let up on a feller," he said.

He was put on probation and told to get a job at once for himself.

SUPPORT OF COLLEGES URGED.

Resolutions indorsing continued support of the College of the City of New York and Hunter College by municipal funds, better pay for the instructors and improved facilities were adopted yesterday by the Board of Governors of Real Estate Investors of New York, Inc. Property ownership and education are fundamental factors in community welfare, it was stated.
